

The prison stockade

At the end of the road from the jetty stood the prison stockade, its massive wooden walls rising menacingly from the ground. The stockade fence was almost four metres high and built of hardwood palings nearly 3cm thick.

This high strong fence enclosed the prison—including the prisoners’ cells, their exercise yards, the workshops, the hospital, and the kitchen – all within an area of more than 155 metres by 92 metres.

The main entrance through the stockade wall was via a heavy gate on the western side.
